Chan Ka Him (2021-2022 6D)

Faculty of Business Administration, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

Having graduated from YLPSS, I must express my sincere, profound gratitude to this wonderful school. On the arduous yet rewarding journey of preparing for DSE, teachers not only enthusiastically shared with us detailed, extensive knowledge to allow us to succeed in the public examination but also actively encouraged us. Hence, we were supported by the deep knowledge as well as tender loving care of our beloved teachers. As a result, I was able to commence my tertiary education in one of the most prestigious universities in Hong Kong, from which our respected principal and many of our teachers graduated. What a great, tremendous honour it is!

It is my conviction that studying is not only about the intensive drilling of examination papers or examination-tackling skills. More importantly, a human being's passion determines the height that he or she reaches. Though it might seem a cliché to assert that students must develop their genuine, even all-consuming, passion for studying to achieve excellent results, I believe that to deny the above statement is impossible because strong motivation functions as a powerful engine to propel a human being to be the cream of the crop.

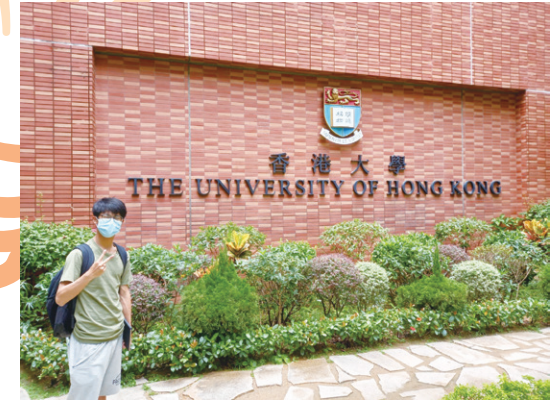

One of the starkest differences between university and secondary school is that self-management is of utmost importance when you study at university. Self-management is, enigmatically, a double-edged sword. On one hand, you have a golden opportunity to practice your time-management skills and different life skills that will be used practically in the foreseeable future. On the other hand, self-management can be a nightmare for students who lack self-discipline. Moreover, there is a whole new world to explore at the university and there is no constraint on you from adopting your own lifestyle. Therefore, you should feel free to explore the university! Throughout four years of study, you will understand yourself better and find a path that will benefit you in your journey of life.

Kwan Wing Hin (2021-2022 6D)

Faculty of Education, The University of Hong Kong

A myriad of changes occurred at university - new courses, new campus, new people - that are all different than those in secondary school. Although adapting to these abrupt changes is not easy, you should always remember that every change signifies a novel opportunity for you to transform into a more experienced person. My new friends at the university have given me new, insightful ideas. Moreover, the new way of learning at the university presents me with a higher degree of freedom to study areas in which I revel. New teaching staff at the university allow me to be more creative. Undoubtedly, I enjoy my new life at The University of Hong Kong because I enthusiastically embrace all the changes and I rejoice in what I am doing now. I am going to commence my extraordinary journey at HKU - how about you?

Wong Suet Yi (2021-2022 6D)

Faculty of Medicine, The Chinese University of Hong Kong

"One's destination is never a place, but a new way of seeing things", said Henry Miller. After I graduated from YLPSS, I began to wholeheartedly embrace my new life at The Chinese University of Hong Kong. A future full of unknown challenges and mysteries is also a turning point in our routine that inspires us to explore the world more thoroughly and break out of our comfort zones.

Before the commencement of the first semester, I joined the orientation camps organized by nursing programme and United College, which is my college. These wonderful events offered me a chance to meet new friends and understand one another, as well as a more profound insight into CUHK. Moreover, there are an array of activities, such as tea gatherings, internship schemes, workshops, art fairs, and so forth. You can certainly enjoy a lifestyle with spice at CUHK and broaden your horizon.

Ma Ho Yin (2021-2022 6D)*School of Engineering, The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology

"Experience is the best teacher." I am currently in my first year as an engineering student at The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (HKUST).

Before graduating from secondary school, I was afraid that I would not be able to make new friends in my university life. Fortunately, when studying at university, I chat with different people whom I meet. Then we will have lunch or dinner in canteens and keep each other's contact numbers. Thus, I successfully recognise and socialise with them. Compared with secondary school, time management at university is different. At university, I have to plan my schedule more carefully since classes on university timetable are more discrete and unfixed.

Therefore, when there is a gap between classes, I will do my revision or search for library information. Unfortunately, library rooms and seats are often packed with users in the afternoon, so I spend more time in canteens during that period.

In class sessions, I come across people with various personalities and nationalities. The first class session that I can immediately recall is a community meeting in a course on sports skills. As far as I remember, we made self-introductions to one another and played two games - Bingo and Scavenger Hunt. These activities allow us to recognise each other's favourites and hobbies, even though we are of different nationalities, like British, Japanese, Korean, and Indonesian. Some of these people even assist me in completing my group assignments later.

Lastly, in order to be productive and efficient in my study time, I always type notes on my laptop and do calculations with my notebooks, but not with a calculator, which is not allowed in mathematics courses. Most importantly, I frequently check my emails and homework on an online platform called Canvas. Working in library is also a fabulous choice to complete tasks in homework sets.

I am having a marvellous university life and aptly transforming from a YLPSSer to a UST undergraduate.
